Turbine-Engined Fleets of the World's Airlines 1988

COMMENTS

The total number of aircraft in service with the world's airlines has risen by over 800 from last year's survey. This is partly due to a general expansion by existing carriers, and also to many new airlines starting business in the last twelve months. In fact the number of airlines in this year's survey has risen to 822 from last year's 773.

Orders for airline equipment, for the period covered, have again reached record numbers, with 1,932 turbine-powered aircraft on order. There are well over 300 additional aircraft on order with the major leasing companies such as GPA Group, International Lease Finance Corp, Ansett Worldwide Aviation Services, and GATX Leasing Corp. These aircraft are not included in the totals because it is not usually known until delivery which airline is going to operate the aircraft.

Airbus continued selling well, while Boeing had a record year with the help of the popular B737. Although there are more B727's in actual service, the B737 has now overtaken the B727 in total commitments making this aircraft type the fastest selling of recent times. Orders for the -300, -400 and -500 models continue to accumulate in large numbers.

As it has been for many years, the Boeing 727 remains the most numerous type in service, with 1686 units. The B737, which is quickly closing the gap, is second with 1426 aircraft, followed by the DC-9/MD-80 with 1315 aircraft in operation.

The Twin Otter continues to be the most popular regional airliner, with 464 in service, followed again by the Fokker Friendship with 434, including variants. The Swearingen Metro remains third with 356 in-service aircraft.

As twin-engined aircraft become more reliable they also become more acceptable and attractive for lower density, long-range, over water routes. This shift in standard operating practices can be noticed by the B767 which has won major orders from British Airways and SAS despite fierce competition from three and four engined aircraft. The B757 is also now being considered for trans-atlantic routes and other extended-range operations.

The B747 remains the most popular choice for very long-range high density routes. The new B747-400 completed its maiden flight at the end of April 1988 and currently accounts for over 120 new aircraft orders.

Other notable milestones during the past year have included the first two A320s entering service with British Airways and Air France; the first major US order for the BAe ATP from Wings West; the first flight of the 737-400; and the first deliveries of MD-87 and MD-88 aircraft to Finnair and Delta Air Lines, respectively. In addition, the first Fokker 50 and Fokker 100 were delivered to DLT and Swissair, respectively.

This summary predominately includes aircraft in airline service at the end of March 1988. Several exceptions to this date have been made in order to accommodate significant developments which occurred in the first few weeks of April (ie. major mergers and aircraft purchases). This summary does not represent the total number of each aircraft type, as many airliners are used as executive or military transports. Some of the airlines in the survey also operate piston-engined aircraft which are not included. Once again the co-operation of the World's airlines is greatly appreciated. More than 74 per cent of them have responded to our survey.

Aircraft in parentheses in the order column are used aircraft, already in service with one airline that are going to be transferred to another, and are thus not included in the orders totals on the summary page. Also not included in the summary are the totals for Aeroflot, as no accurate figures are available. The numbers in the main text are only estimates, and are known to include many government aircraft not used in airline service.

Aircraft leased from one airline to another are recorded as such in the Remarks column, but where an aircraft is owned by a leasing group, or financial institution it is just marked as "Leased". The abbreviations used in the survey are listed in the Glossary on page 54.

This Survey has been compiled by Aviation Data Service, Inc. (AvData), Wichita, Kansas. Every effort has been made to ensure accuracy of the information published in this survey, but complete accuracy cannot be guaranteed. Most airlines cooperated readily by supplying fleet and powerplant details when approached; details for the airlines which were unable to respond have been taken from AvData records.
